

HOW TO WORK LESS AND TRAVEL MORE?

Nomadic people have existed since prehistoric times. Nomads are communities of people travel from one place to another in search of greener pastures. Unlike migration when an individual or community chooses to settle permanently, nomads move from one place to another in search of better opportunities and after a certain time move again. They often return to the same place in a cyclical manner. The early societies know nomads to be hunters, traders or pastors. It was an ideal way to see the world and work at the same time. Gypsies and Arab Bedouins are living proof of today's nomads. However our concern is not nomads but rather their life style that offers us today to work less and travel more.

Yes! You read it right if you want to work less and travel more than nomadic way of life will appeal to your soul. In modern world traveling is much easier than yester years therefore many of the hazards associated with early nomads is gone. Furthermore Internet has knitted the entire world into a global village; you can work as freelancer while sitting on a beach in Thailand for an employer of Wall Street. If working less and traveling more sounds as your cup of tea then go ahead and indulge it is easier than you imagine.

The easiest way perhaps is to acquire online tasks that do not require your presence at a permanent location. Be a freelancer take up online writing tasks, blogging, web designing, the list is endless acquire these jobs make your travel plans and roam around the world carrying your laptop with you. You can easily perform your jobs while traveling the world in fact in some tasks your exposure will help you more.

There is another catch, when choosing a location to travel to you can find out beforehand what products are in demand there from you initial place of departure. Take some of them with you just like nomad traders of early days. Once you reach your destination seek out a local business or trader who is willing to buy those goods and sell them. Initially you may not earn much but gradually as you learn more it will become easier and more pleasurable. If you are travelling from china to Sri Lanka you may find that certain cell phones or laptops are easy to sell so procure them and sell in Sri Lanka. While being in Colombo you may find out that it is famous for traditional handicrafts so acquire a few and sell them in London.

While being in Thailand you may come across cheap copies of branded watches that can be easily sold in Seattle so do that too. These are just a few examples. But be sure that you know the custom laws and regulations before investing in any trading goods.

If you find that small scale trading and online jobs are not sufficient to make ends meet almost every major travel destination offers some part time jobs for short periods. Take these jobs just like you may do summer jobs while being in college and you will be surprised that a nice amount can come in your pocket. The world is out there to be explored so don't sit idle!
